M. E. Church South vs. M. E. Church.

There is much talk among the Methodist clergy and laity of this city regarding the controversy now being carried on in the columns of the Eastern Virginian published in Onancock, Va., and the Richmond Christian Advocate. The controversialists and Rev. Joseph H. Amiss, of the M. E. Church South. The attention of Methodists in this city was called to the matter by the publication of an outline of the controversy pose of making votes for the republican party, and to establish negro equality than to make Christians of the people."

Mr. Amiss, in a letter which appeared in last week's Virginian, says: "The Northern Methodist Church since the war has organized in the South about twenty five and nual conferences, and stationed one of its bishops at Chattanooga, Tenn., and another at New Orleans to superintend the crusade against the Southern Church and people. The rebellion was put down at the point of the bayonet, and now the Church South must be conquered by the 'disintegration, absorption and assimilation' mode of warfare. Our church might have gone into the Northern States since the war, under the pretext that many of the people there were sadly destitute of the Gospel-well nigh heathen-and set up competition with the Northern Church on its own territory, producing neighborhood broils, heart burnings and discord, just as that church has done in the South. But we could not consent to be 'truce breakers.' Our sense of honor and Christian integrity would not allow it."

It is the same old quarrel that has been

which no cognizance will be taken. It would seem to show, though, that these two branches of a common stock are as wide apart now as they were forty-three years see A full and complete stock of first-ago on the question of slavery. The original cause of separation was on the right of Bishop Andrew, of Georgia, to hold slaves. The The Methodist Church took strong grounds against slavery and demanded of Bishop Andrew their manumission. He contended that they belonged to his wife right, under the laws of Georgia, to manu mit them. At the same time he expressed his willingness to sign any legal paper, if any such action on his part. From the Baltimore American R. H. Taylor, are Rev. C. A. Grice, of the M. E. Church, and Rev. Joseph H. Amiss, of the M. E.

> The main cause of the dispute, as stated in the American of Saturday, arises from the alleged encroachment of the M. E. Church on the territory of the Southern Methodists. The first article in the Virginian was called out by a communication from Mr. Amiss, published in the Richmond Christian Advo-cate, stating that the Southern people should be made aware of the fact that the M. E. Church was "totally ignoring the pro-visions of the Cape May Commission and the plan of separation, and have become wonderfully active and aggres-sive of late." He further made the statement that in his opinion the M. E. Church "occupies the South more to day for the pur-cropping out from time to time ever since the separation, and is regarded by many of the clergy here as merely a local matter, of S.S.S. DRY STATE: would seem to show, though, that these two for sale by branches of a common stock are as wide ago on the question of slavery. The original cause of separation was on the right of Bishop Andrew, of Georgia, to hold slaves. The slaves were the property of his wife, whose ownership of them antedated their marand not to him, and, also, that he had no could be done, relieving himself from the responsibility. This was at the General Conference at Albany, New York, 1844. The Southern delegates refused to assent to ence then passed a resolution prohibiting

Church South, said he thought that the fight in Virginia was merely local, and should not be taken notice of by the church at large, He, however, said it was very unfortunate. While the Southern Church has strictly adhered to the rules laid down, the Northern Church has repeatedly broken the rules, and encroached on the Southern The Southern Church has grown with more rapidity than any other Christian organization. In twenty years it has increased its membership from 410,000 to 1,000,000, there being last year over 75,000 new members. The Methodist Church North has been sending its secretaries and ministers through the South ostensibly to preach the gospel to the colored people. Now it is known that the colored people have their own ministers, and do not allow white ministers as their pastors, and it is also known that the ministers so sent South receive liberal salaries, and are sustained by the funds of their general church, as
